TUFTS

1969-73

FOREWORD

At the end of four undergraduate years, the urge to evaluate, to take stock of what, exactly, has happened, is strong. For those of us who spent the years 1969-1973 in college, the question of what it all adds up to is important, not only because there were so many newly legitimated alternatives—dropping out, going to work, becoming “political”—but also because of expectations we brought with us as freshman. College, or, more specifically, Tufts itself, was for many a bright new challenge, a new environment which promised change, enlightenment, opportunities, and status.

For many, the decision to go to college was not a conscious one. Rather it was a course of action expected by parents, educators, and peers. What emerges from conversations with fellow seniors is a lack of consensus over the purpose of an undergraduate education. Few of us talk about the general worth of a liberal education in the traditional sense: that it makes one a more rounded, sensitive, cultured individual. The concern seems to be instead with the “experience” of college as a totality. There is a feeling that such things as meeting new people, living in coed dorms, and going into Boston are just as important and valid as scholarly pursuits, in terms of the learning opportunities Tufts has to offer. A marked resurgence of interest in the arts and in athletics parallels this trend.

Some seniors comment that Tufts has allowed them to lead the life styles they are most comfortable with. On the other hand, a criticism develops to the effect that students today spend their time drifting instead of developing. For some, this is borne out in a lack of an intellectual atmosphere. For others, it means a loss of a sense of community. Tufts may well be an ivory tower, but there seems to be no agreement on whether college as a haven is desirable.

At any rate, there emerges a nostalgia for the activism, outwardness, and political excitement of the late sixties, which has been replaced by a disillusioned, introspective, and passive ambience. Various factors account for this change in priorities, not the least of which is the rising cost of going to college. Students are now being forced to ask, “Is it worth $5000 a year?” Moreover, the tightening of the job market has destroyed the notion that a bachelor’s degree is carte blanche for an interesting, well-paying job. The result is that many of us have become unable to justify four years at Tufts as an end in itself. Undergraduates placed in the position of making a future for themselves are less inclined to be activist while in college. People want to see A’s in return for their investment. More students are graduating from Tufts in three or three and one-half years than ever before.

The disappearance of large-scale political activity has not, in fact, meant the disappearance of individual commitment, as many of us seem to feel. There is a good deal of old-fashioned searching and involvement in the university which is not visible at a fleeting glance. Artistic endeavor and intellectual curiosity are indeed alive, but the last several years have witnessed a split between those who have found an individual goal worth pursuing and those for whom relevance could only exist in a politicised, collective context.

A further theme, also a carryover from past years, is that Tufts is essentially an elitist institution. We feel guilty because we sense that we are too privileged, that college has allowed us, as upper-middle class students, to avoid the sobering responsibilities of the “real world.” The search for “relevance,” through extra-school experiences like internships and field work, is still going on.

Some years ago, out of a different kind of guilt, the universities began recruiting lower income and minority students. The high expectations for integration have recently left many white seniors at Tufts feeling intimidated and frustrated by the desire of black students to keep to themselves. There is a sense of regret that the promise of integration has not been fulfilled. Blacks, on their part, tend to feel that a certain degree of separateness is an essential way to maintain a meaningful identity in the university.

If one theme recurs more often than any other, it is that Tufts is exactly what you make it. There is a widespread conviction that to have a positive and worthwhile undergraduate career one needs to take an active role. The essential attribute of Tufts for many seniors is that is has a program flexible enough to allow individuals to pursue their own learning styles. For many of us this realization probably came hard, for we were a generation accustomed to being passive in education and entertained via the media. Nevertheless a good many of us claim that the turning point came when we began to use the educational structure for our own needs.

In sum we can say only that no self-characterization is possible. As a group, we express such a variety of opinions on these past four years that no trend emerges as dominant. Almost every viewpoint, whether it be on academics, student life, or educational philosophy, seems to be balanced by an opposing one. Clearly, this is a time of changing values in education. It is also a time of uncertainty as to what the role of the university should be. Until a sense of common purpose returns, the college experience will continue to be as individualistic as the quotes on the following pages.

“WELCOME”

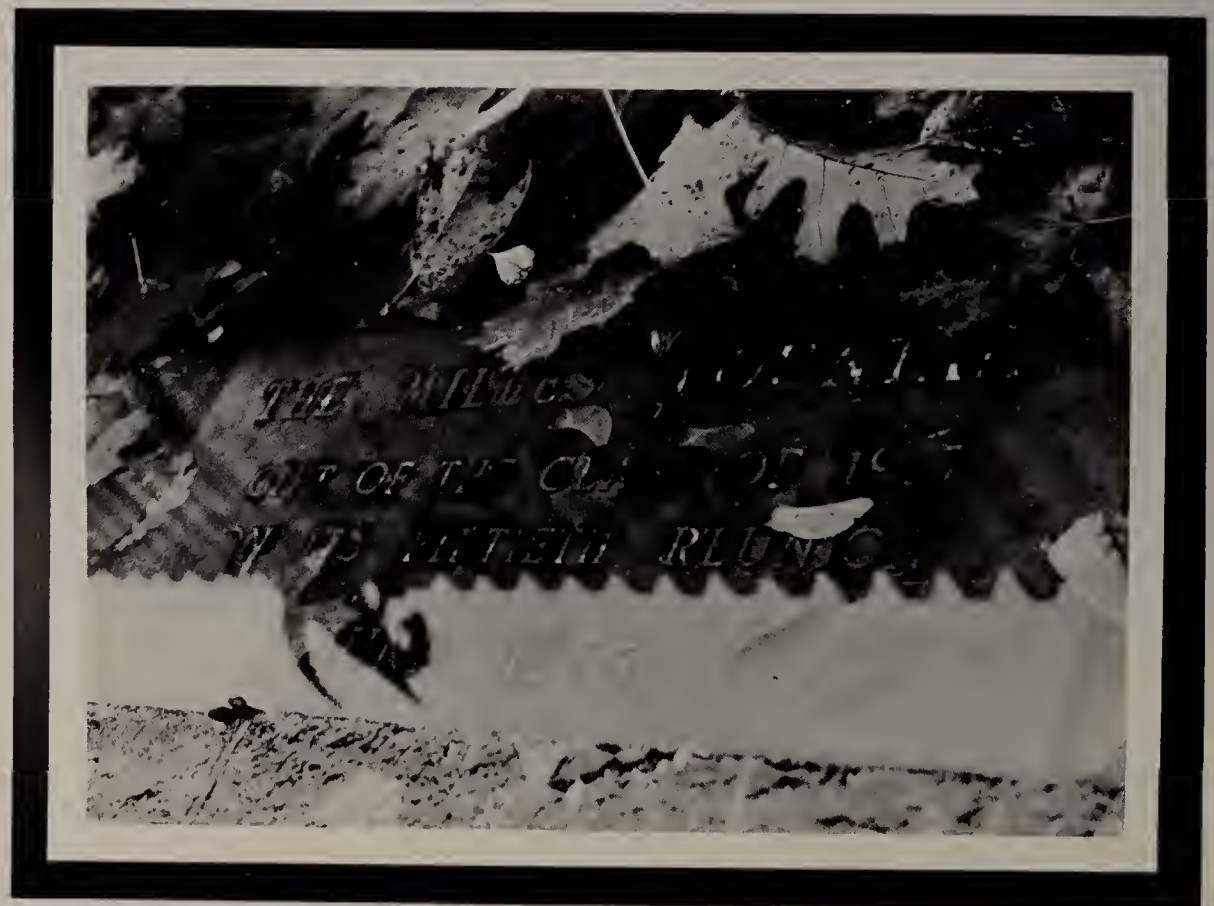

--I've learned that there is a lot of bullshit in undergraduate academics. You thought you'd graduate here as a professional. That's not true.

--Tufts is structured so that if you succeed here it's going to be in spite of the system, not because of it.

--When I applied here my counselors told me what a great place it is. Then I got here and I found out what it's really like.

—It's a place where opportunity doesn't knock on your door. You have to go out and actively pursue it. When I came here I sat around and waited for something to happen. I'm really depressed about the people who spend all four years here doing that. A lot of people sit in their rooms and watch TV and piddle away their time. A lot of people have accepted the doldrums and aren't doing anything about it. I feel like I'm beating my head against the wall when I try to get people off their asses to help. I get a lot of criticism for doing that.

—I was disappointed in the level of academic achievement that is expected of students, but I think I would have been disappointed anywhere.

—Tufts has allowed me to figure out what I wanted to do with the rest of my life.

—I came to Tufts expecting to learn a whole lot of things, gaining some insight into what I wanted to do. I kept waiting for something to click. But it never did. I expected Tufts to tell me what I wanted to do with my life. It didn't. I'm in the same position I was four years ago.

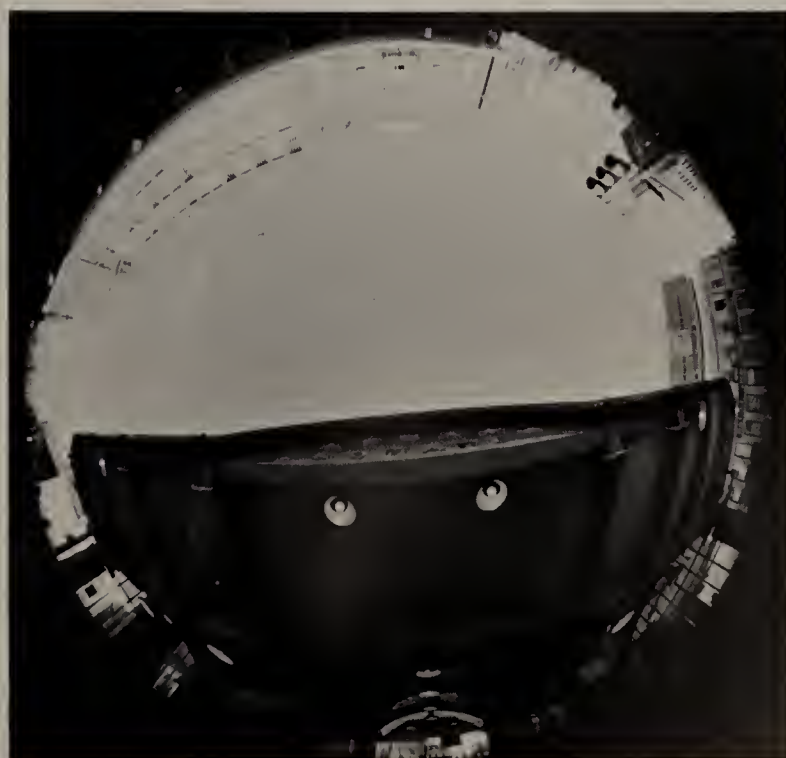

—If you can't find academic stimulation at Tufts, then you should be able to find it in the Boston area. That's the great thing about this place, its location. The reason people feel that Boston isn't taken advantage of is because they are sitting in the library trying to get A's.

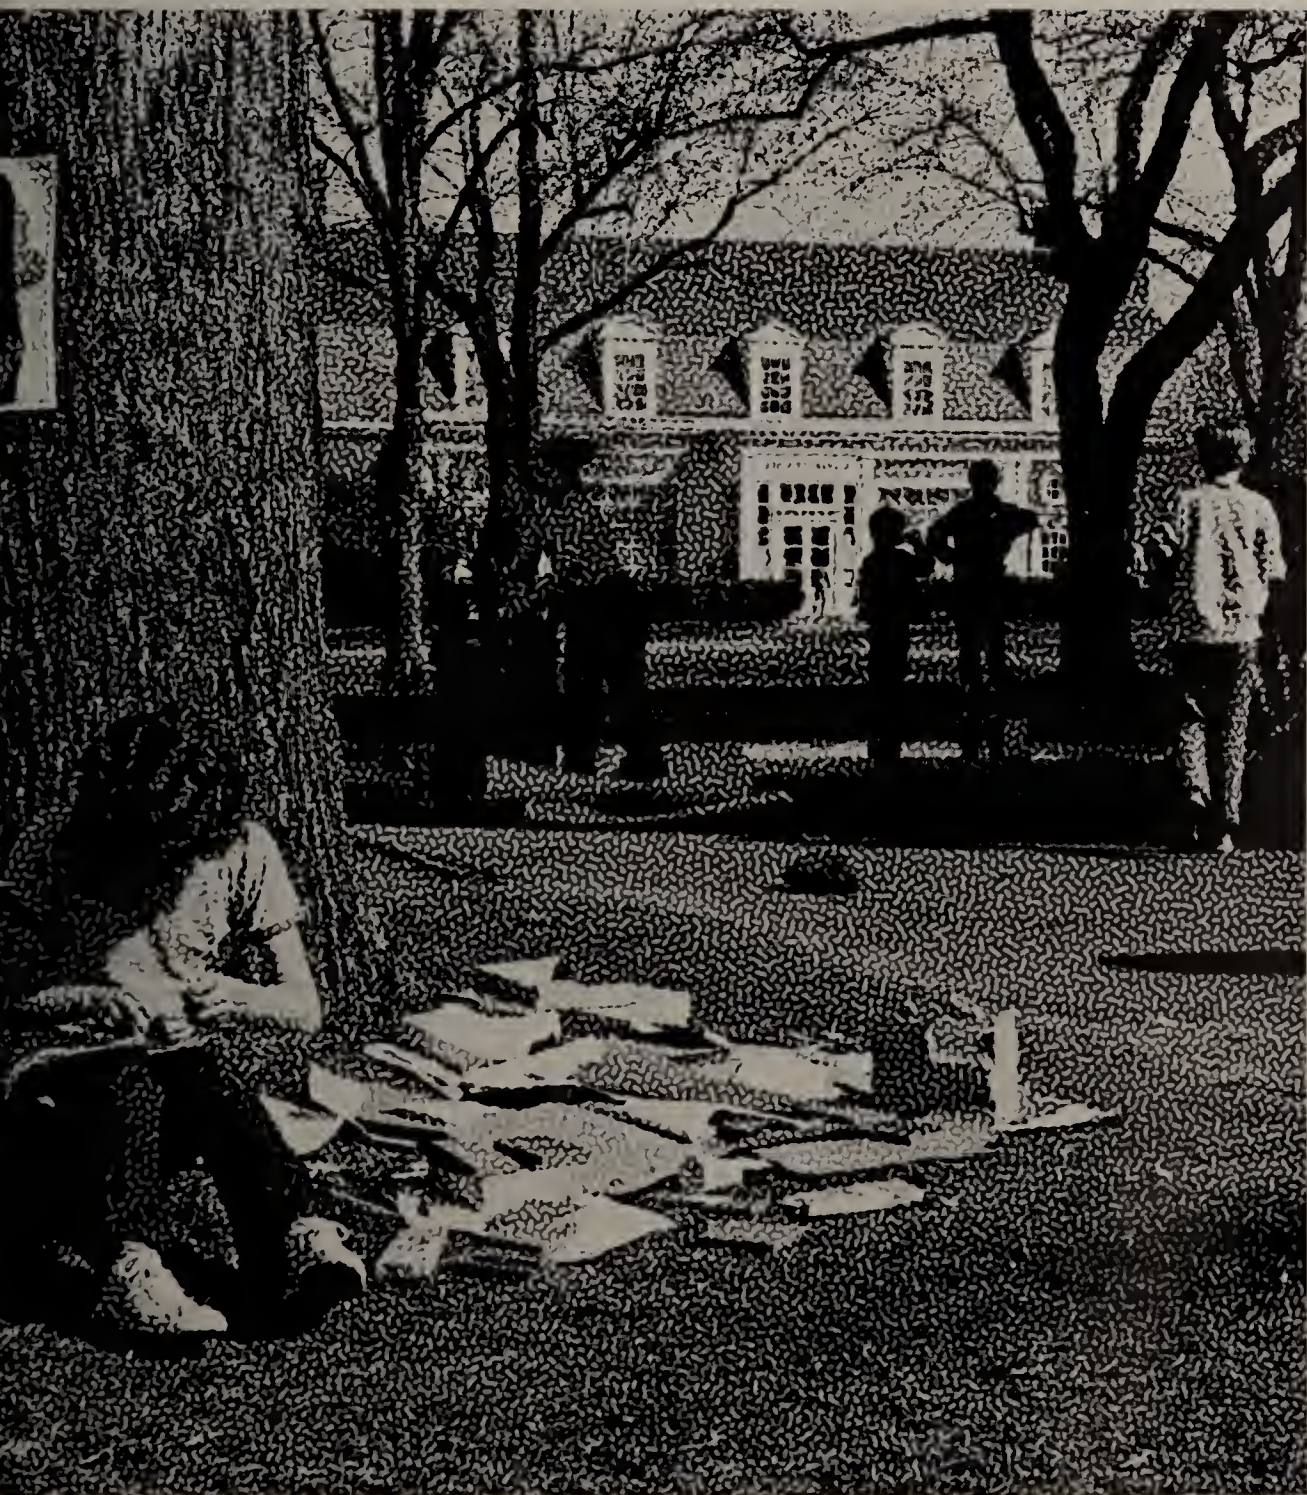

--Tufts location is rotten. It's too much part of the city. I'd like to see more green grass.

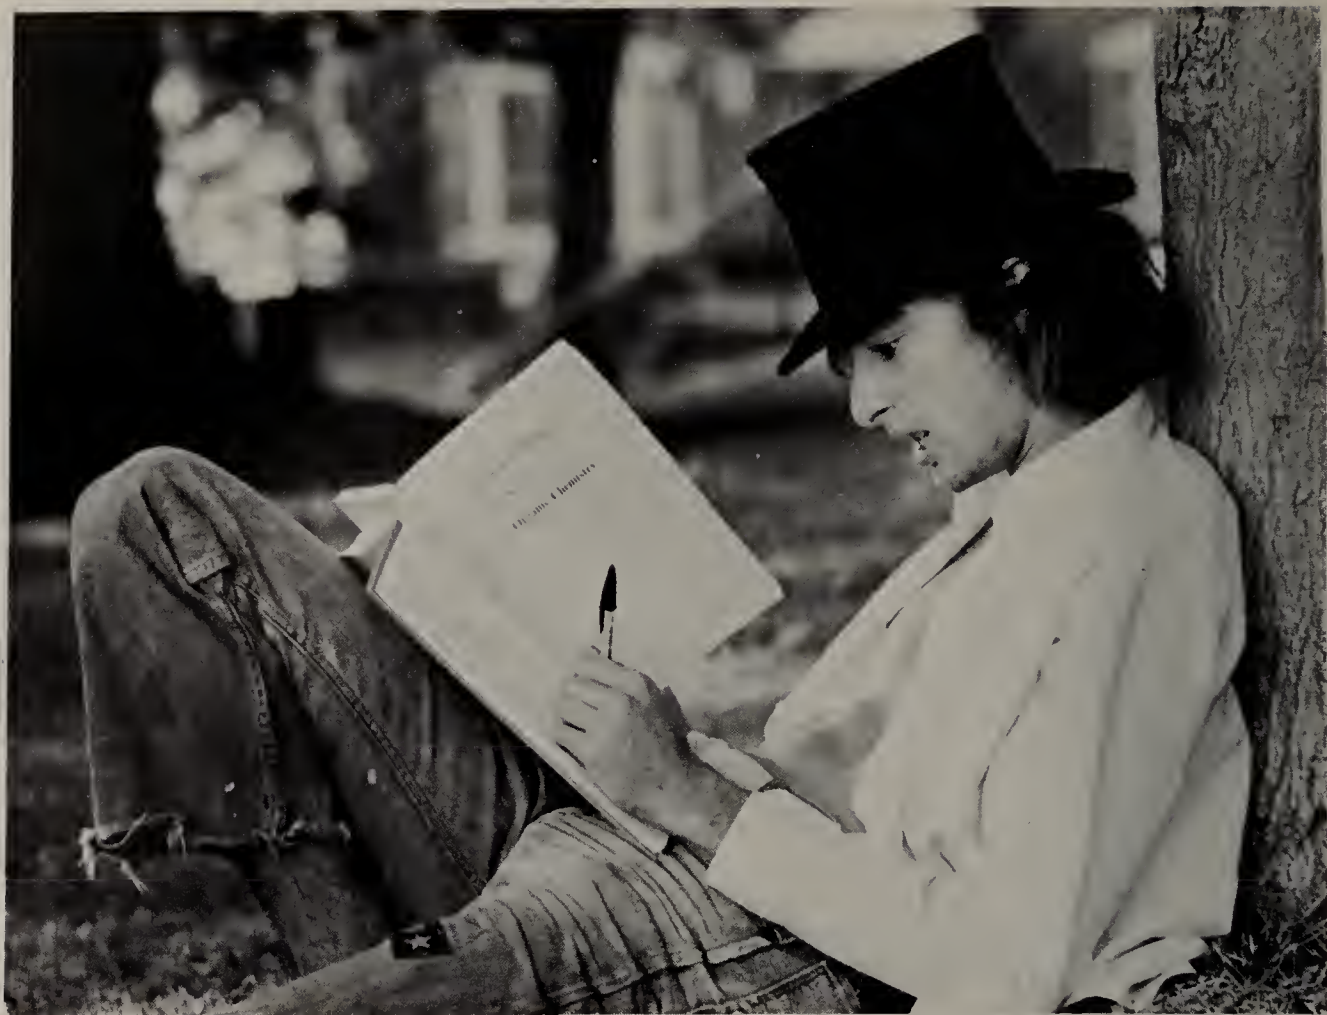

—The student saw on television the difference between the life he lived and that lived by others—richer or poorer, and he felt guilty or outraged, depending on where he lived. Most students had been pushed through a school system that was a pressure cooker, with the drive to get him into college making his early years a continuous and distasteful grind. His range of facts and knowledge had been expanded but he had begun to hate the society that produced all of this. Only college and the opening of new opportunities and a new world of ideas promised a way out.

Bill Wells
Tufts Review

—Academics is something you create. You can make it as hard or as easy as you want. It's going to be that way for the rest of your life.

—I'm applying to law school. Last semester I decided I needed to get some A's to graduate with honors. I did some extra work and got those A's, but I don't think I retained any more because of that.

—I was in England last year and I can't tell you how jealous they were of my being able to attend a liberal arts school. Over there they spend their entire college careers taking courses in their majors. They can only take two non-major courses in four years. They were really envious of me for being able to take any course I wanted to over here.

—The clear majority of the courses in the Experimental College have been opportunities for people to study as persons in order to be persons, which means not suspending one's passionate concerns in order to develop the intellect, or to absorb information, and not indulging unmediated raw feelings.

Carleton Dallery

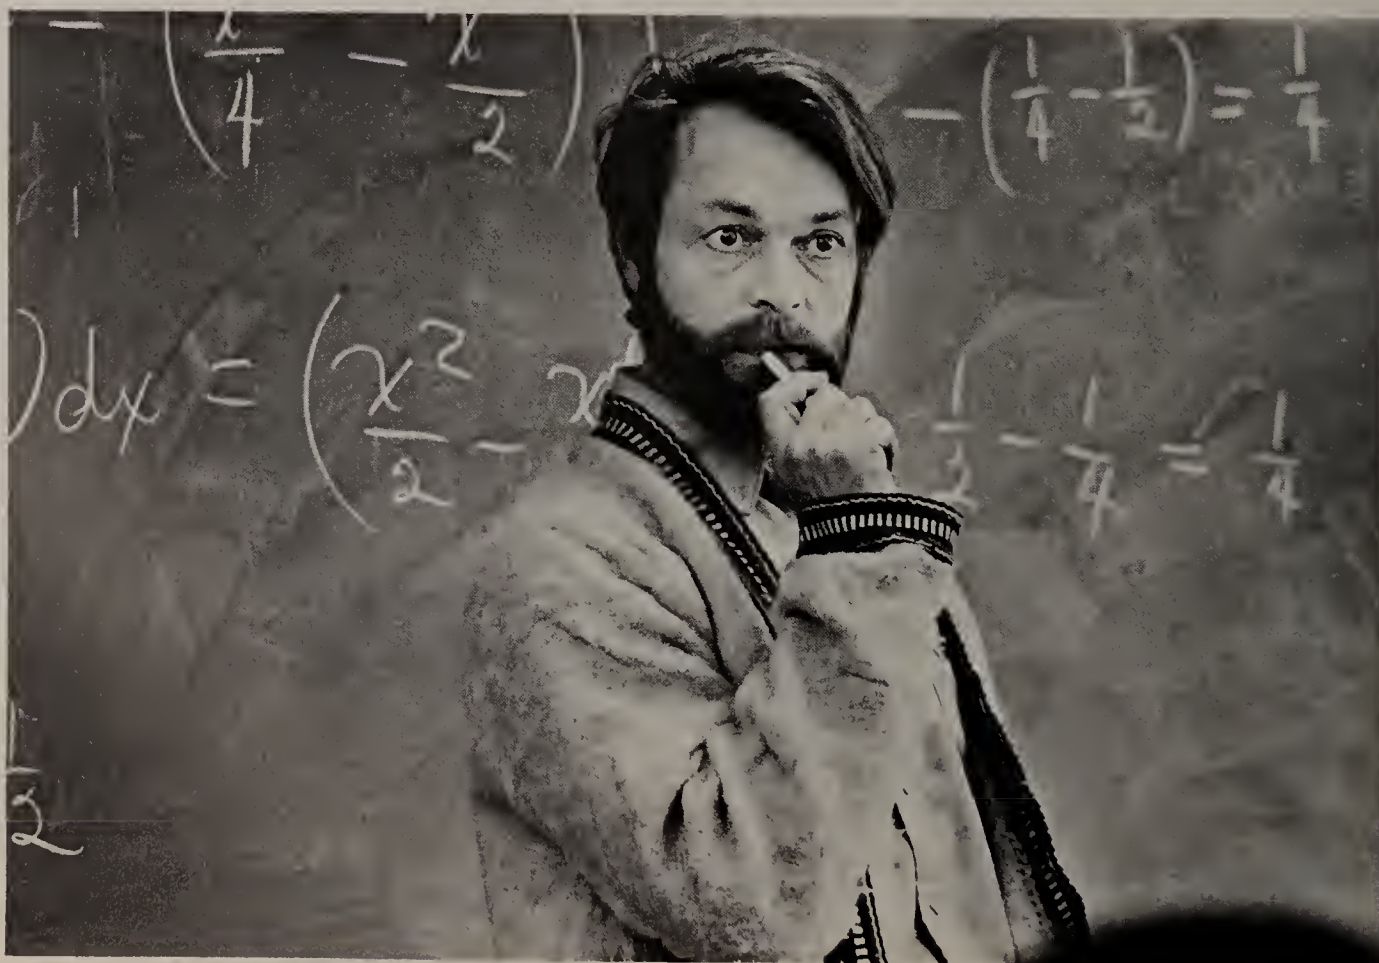

—What are the educational commitments of Tufts? First of all, we recognize that our undergraduate education is directed towards the whole person. We are educating students to lead lives, not primarily to hold jobs. Undergraduate liberal education is not vocational, but it is certainly functional in helping each student to develop a clear and lasting self-concept and to become a responsible citizen.

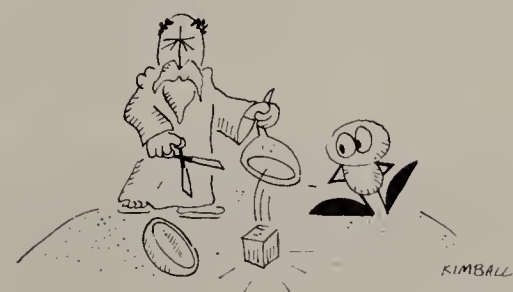

Burton Hallowell

—I don't think the calibre of students is as good now as it was four years ago. There is less interest in the subject matter. People are working to get through rather than to learn for learning's sake. People can't be intellectually committed to a course when they are pushing to get through in three years and are taking five or six classes.

—My education has been self satisfying. It doesn't have anything to do with my career. That's the value of a liberal arts education.

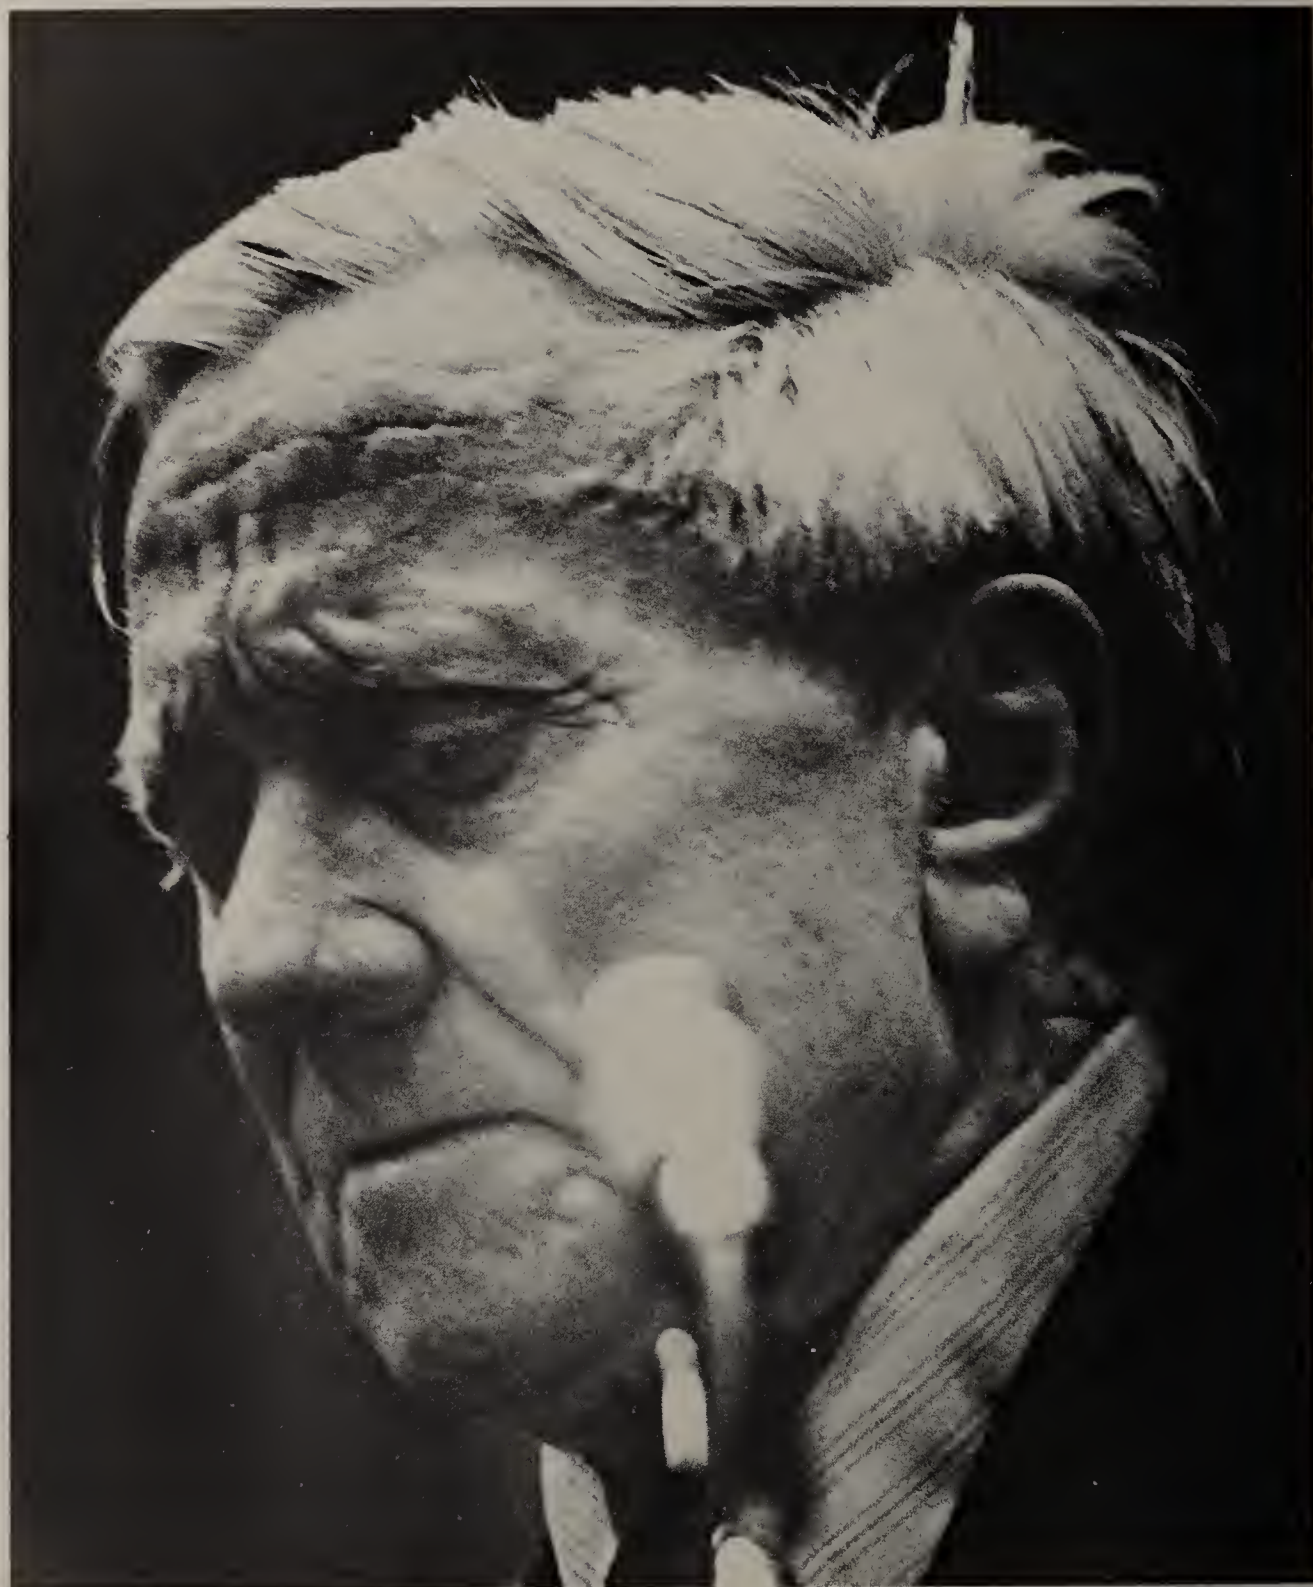

Mohammed Ali, Former Heavyweight Champion

Congresswoman Bella Abzug

Justice William O. Douglas

John Holt, Educator

Daniel Ellsberg, Co-author of the Pentagon Papers

R.D. Laing, Psychiatrist

Senator Edward Kennedy

—Unless those who create are more talented and experienced than those who watch, the theater can have meaning only as self-indulgence; unless a supreme creative intelligence, the playwright, is guiding the work, the theater will serve only the actor's vanity or the director's whim.

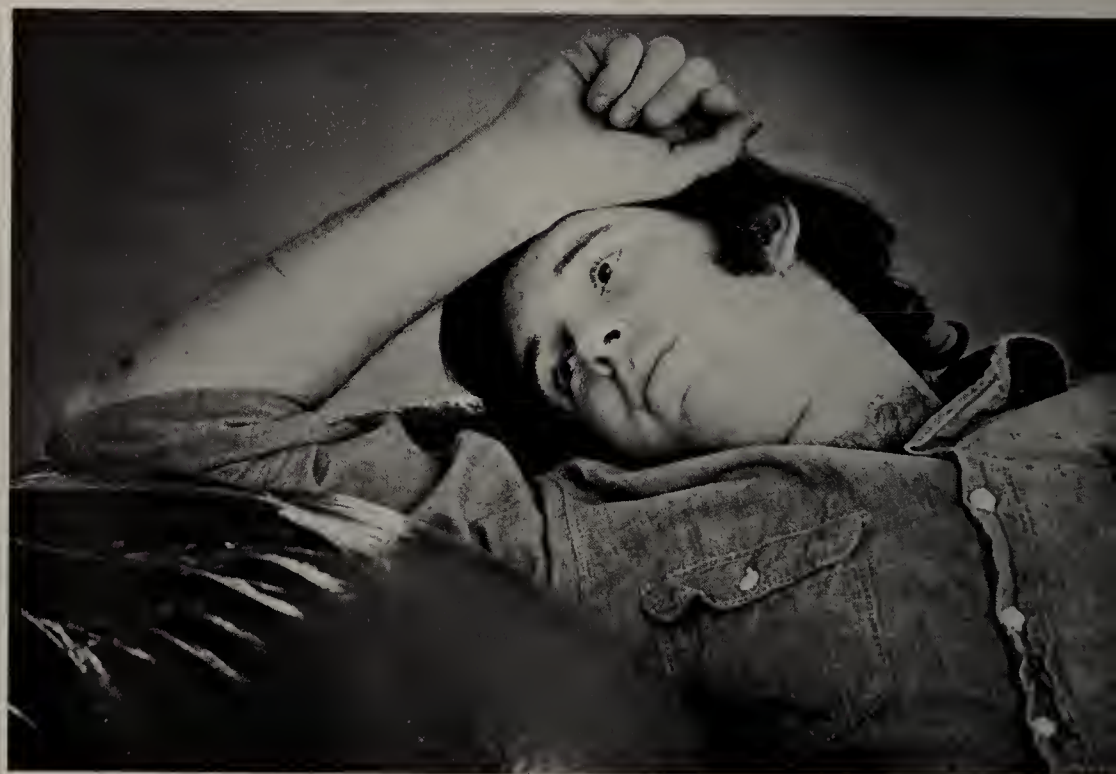

Kalman A. Burnim
Drama Department

—Tufts per se hasn't had any particular effect on me. The education is secondary to the experience of learning to live with people.

--Our dorm was never together. One thing that has brought us together recently is that we got a couple of pinball machines in the basement.

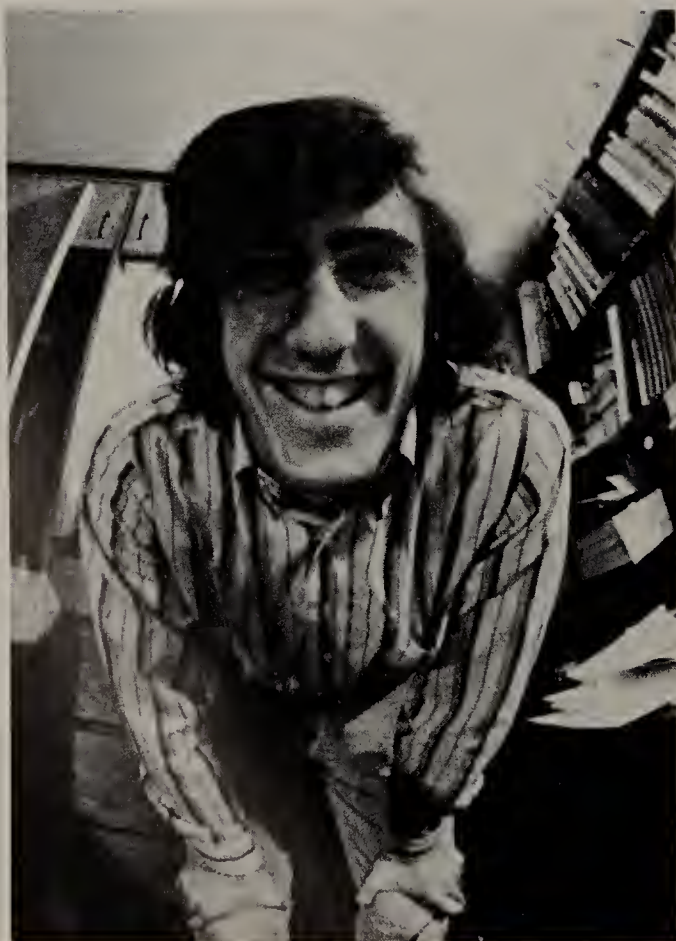

—One thing that freshmen can't appreciate is co-ed dorms. Our class is the last one able to appreciate the values of co-ed dorms, because we didn't have them our freshmen year.

—Too many students sit around smoking dope, listening to records, and watching T.V. There is too much apathy. But that's not the problem with Tufts, it's prolonged adolescence. Kids don't have any responsibility here. Their parents are supporting them and that's true at all colleges.

—You wanna play chess? . . . too bad. I've been pretty heavily into chess lately. We play so that if one guy's getting wiped, you don't play the game out, and if you make a really weak move, you can take it back. We toked and play. You can really get into it.

—The disappearance of large scale political activity has not in fact, meant the disappearance of individual commitment.

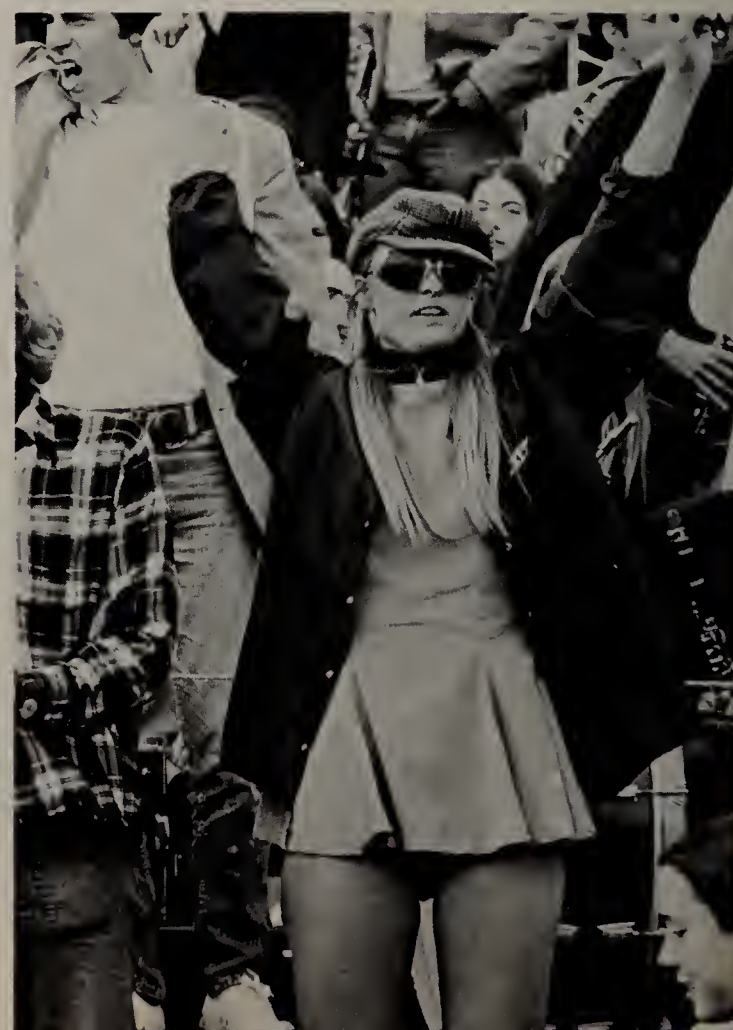

--Through the rigors of training and competing a young man or woman gets a good look at himself: his ability to make intelligent decisions, his capacity for tolerating difficulties and defects, his physical and mental reaction under stress and fatigue, and his adaptability to a group structure. Other disciplines simply do not combine the same perspectives on oneself.

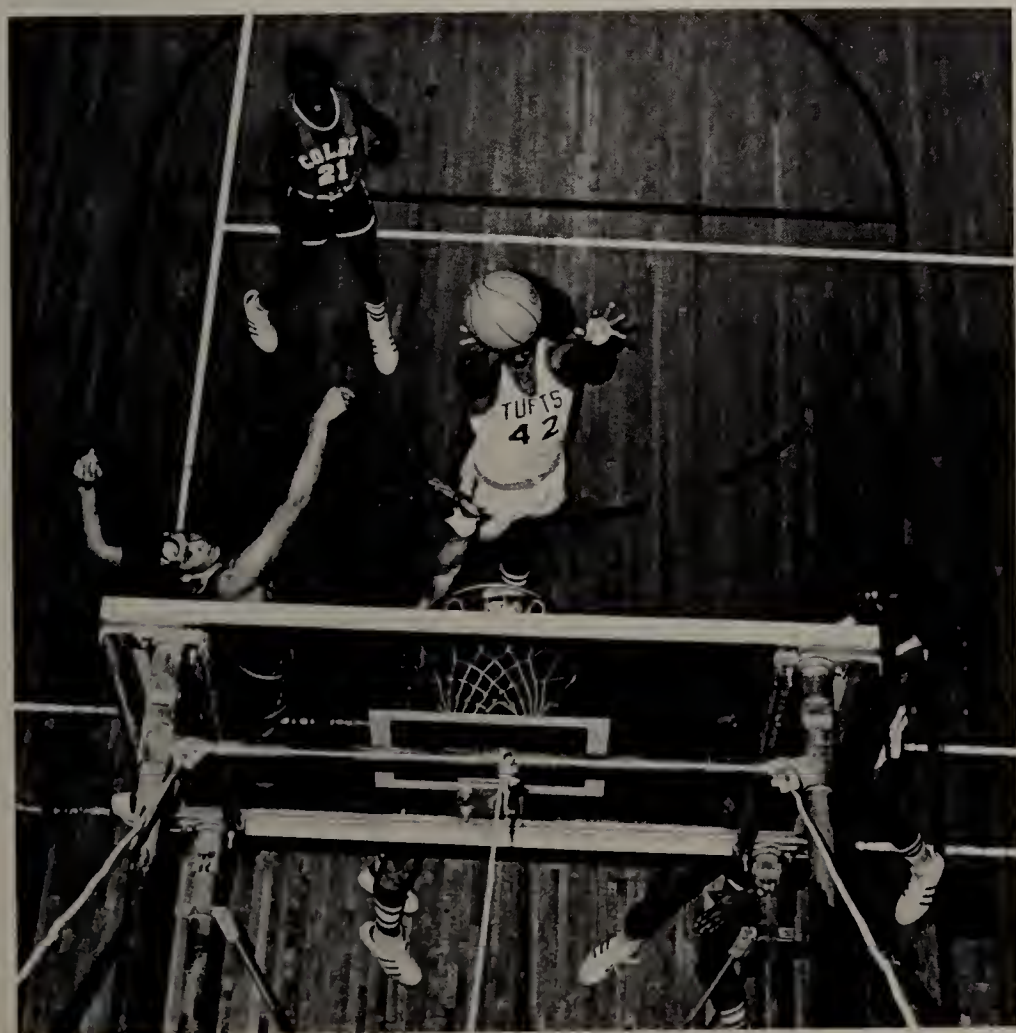

Those athletes who recognize and do not distort themselves and the conditions which helped them to emerge as mature individuals are true beneficiaries of intercollegiate competition.

Rocco J. Carzo
Head Football Coach

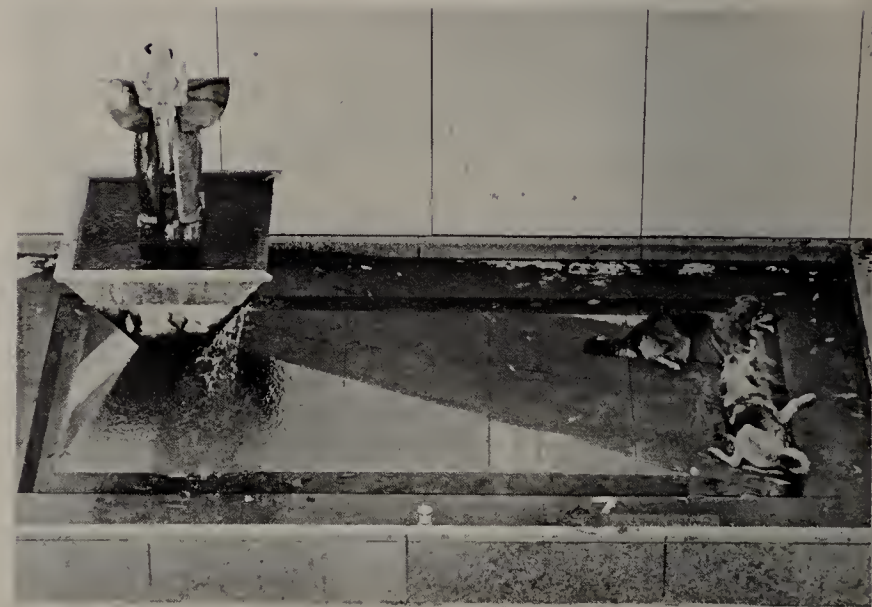

—Blacks, on their part, tend to feel that a certain degree of separateness is an essential way to maintain a meaningful identity in the university.

—It's unfortunate, because I came from a high school where one black graduated in 25 years. It's too bad that there is such division. I think a lot of whites resent how tight the blacks are. I think a lot of whites resent the black sense of community which the whites don't have.

—Because Tufts is a microcosm of American society, Blacks may encounter racism in the classroom, and in the attitudes of faculty and administration, the same kind of racism we encounter at other universities, in high school, on the job or on the street.

—We have input here. The administration is cool but receptive to student demands. In fact the administration has usually been one step ahead of the students. In the College Within, Ex-College, ROTC, Winter Study, and the strike, the administration has led the way.

—I've only seen President Hollowell once in my entire four years here. That was at matriculation.

—The student as protester, politician, and self-appointed world savior has been the image. That image was never true of most students and, during 1972-73 even the activities that created it were gone.

—They are accepting more passive, less rabble-rousing students in 1971 and 1972. You can't get the same kind of involvement now as you did with the Freefer Construction thing or the Cambodia invasion. The students being accepted are more interested in academics and less likely to be radical.

—These four years have separated me from the world.

--Grades are graffiti on the Dean's wall.

--The campus on the whole is a lot less outgoing now than it used to be. People are into themselves now. They're concerned with their futures rather than the present.

The Overlord's Prayer

Out Tufts which are in Medford and/or Somerville
Hallowell be thy name
Thy recruiters come
What has Collective Effort done?
At Tufts, as it is at Harvard?
Give us this day
Our daily demonstration
And forgive us our self-righteousness
As we forgive those who trespass against us . . . damn townies!
Lead us not into bankruptcy
But deliver us from the evil of the TU Express
For thine is the apathy, the ivory tower, and the incompetency forever.

AMEN

Tufts Observer Staff

—People are really having trouble getting jobs. People are working on assembly lines making false eyelashes. When people are faced with that kind of future, it inspires them to get good grades and work hard.

—I don't want to be out of school with only a B.A. because I won't have any bargaining power. I'm going to get an advanced degree; I want more flexibility and mobility.

--I graduated from Tufts last year, and I hate being out. The real world sucks.

The man who follows the crowd will usually get no further than the crowd. The man who walks alone is likely to find himself in places no one has ever been before.

Creativity in living is not without its attendant difficulties, for peculiarity breeds contempt. And the unfortunate thing about being ahead of your time is that when people finally realize you were right, they'll say it was obvious all along.

You have two choices in life: you can dissolve into the mainstream, or you can be distinct. To be distinct, you must be different. To be different, you must strive to be what no one else but you can be . . .
